

How did you become a project manager

In a team there are several types of personalities. It is important that each member of a team discovers what type of personality has to improve, because it helps to advance in the hierarchy of a company.

1

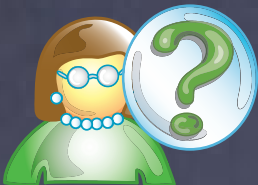

The Team Player

The team player is working well with the others for the common good, cooperates and communicates effectively with all team members. This type doesn't exclude other roles but the team player is an archetype and it brings value and success into the group.

2

The Researcher

The researcher is the one who's asking various questions and receives answers about the project tasks or problems. With these answers he can avoid any mistakes and the project evolves much faster. If you need more information to complete your project, it's important to have a strong researcher who can get it for you.

3

The Expert

While everybody in the team can be an expert in his specific area, the best team usually has an expert in the highly technical matters.

4

The Planner

The planner is the person who plans the project down to the smallest details with the intention of achieving the right goals on the right time and his knowledge is focused on planning strategies.

5

The Creative

Creativity is also needed in a technical project. The creative team member can offer new solutions and focuses on issues that the team might ignore. Every team benefits from a creative thinker in the group, someone who can deliver fresh ideas and solutions.

6

The Communicator

The communicator is the person who can efficiently communicate ideas, opinions and solutions to the team members. His talent stays in its ability to maintain a good communication for the benefit of the team.

7

The Leader

The leader is an important member of the team who can influence others members to achieve their goals and he has the ability to evoke respect and confidence.

Which personality types listed above characterizes you and helped you to become a project manager?